Study Abroad - Ghana
The "REAL" Africa

Enter Amount to Pay:

This interdisciplinary course is an academic/cultural opportunity designed to explore the contemporary "way of life" of a modern West African society. This is a 10 to 14-day experiential sojourn that will introduce participants to the "real Africa." The course will address topics in public health, education, sociology, public policy, and government. Students from varying disciplines and community-based professionals will have the opportunity to think critically about both the commonalities and the differences between their lives in the United States in comparison to what they will see in Ghana. Program members will be required to observe and/or participate in cultural, academic and service-learning activities.
