

COAXING/COAXINGS/COAXINGLY

Usually as coaxing (out of 9 examples) regardless of part of speech; with the exceptions of coaxingly as an adverb (See: OIMSPR-8, ROVTSR10) and, one instance of coaxings as a plural noun (See: NSTYR2-0).

AF-MS-03, .p10

Impenetrable

to persuasion, coaxing, abuse, to soft words and shrill revilings, to desperate beseechings or murderous threats.

AF-TSR03, .p48

Impenetrable to persuasion, coaxing, abuse; to soft words and shrill revilings; to desperate beseechings or murderous threats; for Mrs.

VICTPR33, .p318

-- {op"} You are putting it on" she interrupted in her seductive voice with a coaxing intonation.

NSTYR2-0, .p115

Distracted

between the coaxings and menaces of Sotillo and his staff the miserable commander of the steamer kept her moving with as much prudence as they would let him
.p116
exercise .

OIMSPR11, .p171

He saw

himself -- an object creature -- ob*ing the orders of that one-eyed abortion, of that being, hardly human, who had been coaxing and menacing him in turns.

OIMSPR-8, .p121

-- {op"} Look how he runs away dearest." -- he said coaxingly.
{op"} Isn't he funny.

ROVTSR10, .p186

She got up suddenly and caressed the thin, half-averted, withered cheek with the tips of her fingers and in a low voice with that marvellous cadence that plucked at one's heart strings,

she said coaxingly:

{op"} C'etat des songes, ne'est ce pas?"

In her immobility the old woman called with all the might of her will for the presence of Peyrol.

ROVTSR-7, .p115

She didn't want much coaxing.

SES-MS-1, .p54

Then his eyes wavered, all his expression changed and in a voice unusually gentle almost coaxing

{op"} May I come in to take the empty
cup away sir."

{op"}Of course".