

EASTWARD/EASTWARDS

20 (out of 20) uses of eastward; ZERO uses of eastwards. 2 (out of 20) instances of cap. Eastward for no apparent reason (See: UPR-MS-o, .p52; FRSTSR-5, .p84)

AF-MS-05, .p18

Over the low river-mist hiding the boat with its freight of young passionate life and all forgetting happiness the stars paled, and a silvery grey tint crept over the sky from the eastward.

AF-TSR-05, .p87

Over the low river-mist hiding the boat with its freight of young passionate life and all forgetful happiness, the stars paled, and a silvery grey tint crept over the sky from the eastward.

UWE-MS22, .p433

The wild beast was making its way instinctively eastward to the pacific coast, and the civilized humanitarian followed in fearful anxious dependance
.p434
watching the proceedings with awe and a sort of horror-struck curiosity.

UWE-MS22, .p434

The boat had to be secured to cross the river, for weighted as he was the narrowest stream if more than six foot deep presented an unsurmountable obstacle to his eastward march.

UWETSR22, .p209

The wild beast was making its way instinctively eastward to the Pacific coast, and the civilised humanitarian followed in fearful anxious dependence watching the proceedings with awe.

VICTPR15, .p72

Meantime Berg and
.p72
the girl were a good few miles away having gone in the night on board one of the Tesman schooners bound to the eastward.

CHNTYR22, .p31

The hull of the Ferndale swung head to the eastward, where it caught the light, her tall spars and rigging steeped in a bath of red gold from the water-line full of glitter to the trucks slight and gleaming against the deicate expanse of the blue.

GEO-MS-1, .p48

And
on the other side of the rapids the unbroken power of the Congo Arabs lay slumbering before the last effort to keep its hold on the immense forests to the eastward.

UPR-MS-0, .p52

This expanse is bounded to the Eastward by the Mⁿ land.

OIMSPR18, .p292

For the first time in many months the dark coast slept unseen by the stars under a veil of motionless cloud that, driven before the first breath of the rainy monsoon, had drifted slowly from the eastward all the afternoon, pursuing the declining sun with its masses of black and grey that seemed to chase the light with wicked intent and with an ominous and gloomy steadiness, as though conscious of the message of violence and turmoil they carried.

OIMSPR23, .p403

over the sky was stretched a network of white threads a network fine and close meshed where here and there were caught thicker white vapours of globular shaped and to the eastward above the ragged barrier of the forests surged the summits of a chain of great clouds, growing bigger slowly in imperceptible motion
as they climbed up above the tree tops, climbed noiseless and gentle as if careful not to disturb the glowing stillness of the earth and of the sky.

RESTR23, .p20

At sunrise, while the big ship from the West, her sides streaked with rust and grey with the salt of the sea, was moving slowly in to take up a berth near the shore, Lingard left the roadstead on his way to the eastward.

RESTR-1, .p4

And to the eastward, a troop of insignificant and dangerous islets stand effaced, indistinct, with vague features that seem to melt into the gathering shadows.

RESTR-1, .p4

The
night following from the eastward the retreat of the setting sun advanced slowly, swallowing the land and the sea; the land broken, tormented and abrupt; the sea smooth and inviting with its easy polish of continuous surface to wanderings facile and endless.

ROVTSR15, .p324

The tartane, obeying the helm, fell off before the wind, with her head to the eastward.

ROVTSR15, .p325

Above his head the unbroken mass of clouds moved to the eastward, and he moved in the same direction
.p326
as if he too were driven by the wind up the hillside, towards the lookout.

ROVTSR16, .p346

Half an hour afterwards
he was back on board, and the Amelia with the tartane in tow made sail to the eastward in search of the blockading fleet.

ROVTSR16, .p350

The quiet and sunshiny morning had the added charm of a cool light breeze; and the Victory, under her three topsails and lower staysails, was moving slowly to the eastward in the midst of the scattered fleet carrying for the most part the same sail as the Admiral.

FRS-MS-5, .p151

stx }

Next it must be recorded that the same day the gunboat {op"}Neptun" steering East passed the brig {op"}Bonito" becalmed in sight of Carimata with her head to the eastward too.

FRSTSR-5, .p84

stx }

Next it must be recorded that the same day the gunboat {op"} Neptun" steering East passed the brig {op"}Bonito" becalmed in sight of Carimata with her head to the Eastward too.

.p84