

INWARD/INWARDLY/INWARDS/INWARDNESS

Inward used as an adjective in 55 examples (out of 119). Inwardly used as an adverb in 51 examples. Inwardness always used as a noun in 9 examples. Inconsistent application of inwards in 4 examples (See: VICTPR15, NN-MS-03, VICTPR44, VICTPR48).

AF-MS-03, .p11

It ended generally by Almayer raising slowly, his long pipe in hand, and the face set into a look of inward pain and walking away in silence.

AF-MS-04, .p1

Even
the loyal soul of Lakamba was stirred into a state of inward discontent by the withdrawal of his license for powder and by the abrupt confiscation of 150 barrels of that commodity by the gunboat {op"}Princess Amelia", when after a hazardous voyage it had almost reached the mouth of the river.

AF-MS-04, .p20

And the two would separate, the arab cursing inwardly the wily dog, while Babalatchi went on his way, walking on the dusty path, his body swaying, his chin with its few gray hairs pushed forward, ressembling an inquisitive goat bent on some unlawful expedition.

AF-MS-12, .p14

Inwardly he felt himself torn to pieces but Ali who -- now aroused -- stood close to his master saw on his features the blank expression of those who live in that hopeless calm which sighless eyes only can give.

AF-TSR03, .p49

It ended generally
by Almayer rising slowly, his long pipe in hand, his face set into a look of inward pain, and walking away in silence.

AF-TSR04, .p59

Even the loyal soul of Lakamba was stirred into a state of inward discontent by the withdrawal of his license for powder and by the abrupt confiscation of 150 barrels of that commodity by the gunboat {op"}Princess Amelia," when, after a hazardous voyage, it had almost reached the mouth of the river.

AF-TSR04, .p72

And the two would separate, the Arab cursing inwardly the wily dog, while Babalatchi went on his way walking on the dusty path, his body swaying, his chin with its few gray hairs pushed forward, resembling an inquisitive goat bent on some unlawful expedition.

AF-TSR12, .p261

Inwardly he felt himself torn to pieces, but Ali -- who now aroused -- stood close to his master, saw on his features the blank expression of those who live in that hopeless calm which sightless eyes only can give.

CHNTRY11, .p6

He craved for sympathy but his friend had just {op"} got a ship" that very morning and as hurrying home in a state of outward joy and inward uneasiness usual to a sailor who after many days of waiting suddenly gets a berth.

CHNTRY12, .p58

After tea we would sit down to chess and then Fyne's everlasting gravity became faintly tinged by an attenuated
.p58
gleam of something inward which resembled sly satisfaction.
Of the divine frivolity of laughter he was only capable over a chess-board.

CHNTRY13, .p104

He held himself very upright, walked with small steps and spoke gently in an inward voice.

CHNTRY14, .p153

Being
beckoned closer imperiously and asked by the governess to bring out of the now empty rooms the hat and veil, the only objects besides the furniture still to be found there, she did so in silence but inwardly fluttered.

CHNTRY14, .p160

He rimaginatin had, like her body, gone off in a wild bound to meet the unknown; and then to hear after all something which more in its tone than in its substance was mere venomous abuse, had steadied the inward flutter of all her being.

CHNTRY14, .p170

Fyne sitting by patiently, her arms folded, yet inwardly moved by the riddle of that distress of which she could not guess the word, and saying to herself: {op"} That child is too emotional -- much too emotional to be ever really sound!"
As if anyone not made of stone could be perfectly sound in this world.

UWE-MS12, .p122

It was sublime!

Inwardly he wept and trembled already.

UWE-MS12, .p174

And
this thought re-inforced the inward quietness of Razumov as he began to climb the stairs familiar to his feet in the dark, with his hand on the familiar clammy bannister.

UWE-MS12, invalid format

UWE-MS-21, .p415
---}{op"}It may be easier" I admitted admiring inwardly the directness and the subtlety of the girl's outlook.

UWE-MS-23, .p591
As to his books
whose titles intruded upon my memory, The Resurrection of Yegor, The Pride of Darkness, the thrice famous Pfennig Cantata, the whole broadcast seed of thin opuscles which I had seen being avidly scanned by the serious eyes of youth, I only smiled inwardly at the recollection with sympathy{--}for the youth for the gallant appetite of tender years making nothing of the very peculiar flavour of that
.p592
wisdom-fruit from a foreign clime.

UWE-MS-24, .p748
The attempted smile was given up, the incipient frown was checked,
and smoothed so that there should be no sign; but I imagined him exclaiming inwardly {op"}Her confidence! To this elderly person{--}this foreigner!" I imagined that because he looked foreign enough to me.

UWE-MS-33, .p990
He stiffened himself
inwardly to repel it, to evade it not exactly with fear but with the shrinking of disgust.

UWE-MS-33, .p1017
That
must have been the fellow!
He smiled inwardly at the absolute wrongheadedness of the whole
.p1018

thing, the self deception of a criminal idealist shattering his existence like a thunder-clap out of a clear sky and re-echoing amongst the wreckage in the false assumptions
of those other fools.

UWE-MS-34, .p1079

He would come upon it presently and hasten to write another letter{--}and then!

For all the envenomed recklessness of his temper fed on hate and
.p1079

disdain Razumov shuddered
inwardly.

UWE-MS-41, .p1172

The obtaining by the departement of a letter of recommendation from Father Zosim the priest democrat
.p1172

is another fact the inwardness of which may be guessed by the western reader.

UWE-MS-42, .p1207

Oh you would not be able to detect . . .It's inward
but I who know mother I am appalled.

UWE-MS-43, .p1283

He was master of himself but even then
he seemed to me
to be watching himself inwardly
A curious appearance as though
.p1284

he were trying to count his own heart beats while his eyes never for a moment left the face of the girl.

UWETSR12, .p60

It was sublime!

Inwardly he wept and trembled already.

UWETSR12, .p82

And this thought re-inforced the inward quietness of Razumov as he began to climb the stairs familiar to his feet in the dark, with his hand on the familiar clammy bannister.

UWETSR13, .p113

He shut up all the books and rammed all his papers into his pocket with convulsive movements, raging inwardly against Haldin.

UWETSR21, .p200

op"}It may be easier," I admitted, admiring inwardly the directness and the subtlety of the girl's outlook.

UWEYSR24, .p349

The attempted smile was given up, the incipient frown was checked, and smoothed so that there should be no sign; but I imagined him exclaiming inwardly:
{op"}Her confidence! To this elderly person{--}this foreigner!"

UWETSR33, .p530

He stiffened himself inwardly to bear it without betraying himself.

UWETSR33, .p550

That must have been the fellow!

He smiled inwardly at the absolute wrongheadedness of the whole thing, the self deception of a criminal idealist shattering his existence like a thunder-clap out of a clear sky and re-echoing amongst the wreckage in the false assumptions of those other fools.

UWETSR34, .p600

He would come upon it presently and hasten to write another letter{--}and then!

For all the envenomed recklessness of his temper fed on .p600 hate and disdain Razumov shuddered inwardly.

UWETSR42, invalid format

UWETSR43, .p775

An extraordinary coolness had succeeded the confusion and trouble of the first moments of their meeting;
.p775
but even then he seemed to me to be watching himself inwardly, as though he were trying to count his own heart beats while his eyes never for a moment left the face of the girl.

VICTPR15, .p57

He could not keep it up tho' .Suddenly he turned inwards with a bruque rage

VICTPR15, .p57

-- {op"}Thank you" said Davidson inwardly startled at the savage tone.

VICTPR22, .p118

Neither did he feel very safe in there; or that sentiment depends not on extraneous circumstances but on our inward conviction.

VICTPR23, .p135

op"} This shall be my defence against life" he had said to himself with a sort of inward consciousness that for the son of his father there was no other worthy alternative.

VICTPR26, .p189

The consciousness of his inwardly abject attitude towards these men .p190 caused him always to throw his chest out and assume a severe expression.

VICTPR26, .p198

The stream of ingenious blasphemy, some of it in bad Spanish, had run dry, and Martin Ricardo connoisseur in gentlemen, sat dumb with a stony gaze as if still marvelling inwardly at the amazing elections, conjunctions and associations of events which influence man's pilgrimage on this earth.

VICTPR27, .p230

op"} You don't say so!" He .p230 exulted inwardly as if this disclosure had in some way diminished the difficulty of the situation.

VICTPR31, .p269

This was his inward existence.

VICTPR35, .p381

The man of all renunciations squirmed inwardly.

VICTPR38, .p427

He had felt a blow struck within his throat an inward and arresting shock, to conscious- .p428 of fears and hopes outside of himself and pound with his actions.

CHNTYR16, .p224

Fyne as though he were inwardly amused at something he knew of them; and then beginning ironically his discourse.

CHNTYR16, .p249

What is to be noted is that even in London, having had time to take a reflective view, poor Flora was far from being certain as to the true inwardness of the violent dismissal.

CHNTYR17, .p295

But why she, that girl who existed on sufferance, so to speak --why she should writhe inwardly with .p296 remorse because she had once thought of getting rid of a life which was nothing in every respect but a curse -- that I could not understand.

CHNTYR22, .p53

Smith's eyes had a sort of inward look as though he had disliked or disdained his surroundings.

CHNTYR24, .p104

Woman's self-possession is an outward thing; inwardly they flutter; perhaps because they are, or they feel themselves to be, encaged.

CHNTYR24, .p106

op"}Never!" All the supremely refined delicacy of tenderness, expressed in so many fine lines of verse by Carleon Anthony, grew to the size of a passion filling with inward sobs the great silent fray of the man who had never in his life read a single one of those famous sonnets singing of the most highly civilized, chivalrous love; of those sonnets which .

CHNTYR24, .p116

This special state is peculiar to common lovers, who are known to have no eeys for anything except for the contemplation, actual or inward, of one human form which for them contains the soul of the whole world in all its beauty, perfection, variety and infinity.

CHNTYR25, .p172

then he apologised by a faint as if inward ejaculation {op"}Beg your pardon, Captain." Naturally she addresse Anthony as Roderick and he addressed her as Flora.

CHNTYR26, .p231

The inwardness of what was passing before his eyes was hidden from him, who had looked on, more impenetrably than from me who at a distance of years was listening to his words.
What presently happened at this crisis in Flora de Barral's fate was beyond his power of comment, seemed in a sense natural.

CHNTYR26, .p252

And then

.p252

perhaps he remembered the soothing fact for he allowed a gleam to light up his eyes, like the reflectin of some inward fire tended in the sanctuary of his heart by a devotion as pure as that of any vestal.

CHDT1R-1, .p05

The inwardness of these eccentricities.

CHDT2R-1, .p05

And even then I did not understand the inwardness of these eccentricities.

CHDT3R-1, .p05

And even then I did not understand the inwardness of these
eccentricities.

WAB-MS-1, .p5

But as

to masterpiece there is no doubt that the R B of C is that

.p5

if only because of the marvellous adjustment in the vivid tonality of narrative depiction of the sounds and sights of that woodland battlefield and the analysis of emotions, the record of inward struggle with the greatest doubt of all in the breast of one individual -- the {op"} young soldier" par excellence of the book, the protagonist monodrama

embodied in a most picturesquely worded narrative.

TRDTNR-1, .p1
stx}

The Master who had meditated so deeply on the rebirth of arts and sciences, on the inward beauty of all things -- ships' lines, women's faces -- and on the visible aspects of nature was profoundly right in his pronouncement on the work that is done on the Earth.

TRDTYR-1, .p01
stx}

The Master who had meditated so deeply on the rebirth of arts and sciences, on the inward beauty of all things -- ships' lines, women's faces -- and on the visible aspects of nature was profoundly right in his pronouncement on the work that is done on
.p02
the Earth.

NN-MS-01, .p5
Under the white moustache the lips, stained with tobacco juice that trickled down the long beard moved in inward whisper.

NN-MS-02, .p33
The
cook approached to hear and stood by beaming with the
.p33
inward consciousness of his faith, like a conceited saint unable to forget his glorious reward.

NN-MS-03, .p58
Many hung their heads
muttering that it {op"} Turned their inwards out" to look at it.

NSMS106B, .p200
For a moment biting her carmine lip sahe deplored inwardly to herself the tyranny of
of the rigid principles governing the sale of her influence,
added significantly, and with a touch of impatience.

NSMS106G, .p257.
--"No end" said Mr Gould marvelling inwardly at the mobility of
.p258
her physiognomy.

NSTYR1-B, .p60

He mastered the trembling of all his limbs, of his breast, the inward trembling of all his body exhausted of its nervous force.

OIMSPR11, .p170

In his set face the eyes blazed suddenly with an inward fire -- and went out.

OIMSPR13, .p203

And now Willems looking out of his dream ing numbness could see plainly the kriss between the thin lips, on an arc across the face, the handle on one side where the polished wood caught a red gleam from the fire and the thin line of the blade running to a dull black point on the other, -- He felt an inward shock which left his body passive in Aissa
s embrace but filled his breast with a tumult of powerless fear, and he understood suddenly that it was his own death that was groping towards him; that it was the hate of himself and the hate of her love fore him which drove this helpless wreck of a once brilliant and resolute murderer to attempt a desperate deed that would be the glorious and supreme consolation of an unhappy old age.

OIMSPR22, .p401

Her eyes were fixed upon the dark doorway but her hands strayed mechanically upwards, she took up all her hair and inclining her head slightly over her shoulder she wrung out the long black tresses, twisting them persistently looking like one listening to an inward voice -- the voice of bitter and unavailing regret.

OIMSPR-1, .p9

His Wife, -- He winced inwardly.

RESTR31B, .p119

Was it compassion he felt? It must have been, since in that misty feeling that came to him he associates the man before his eyes with the perplexed, the resolute, the nescating, the assured, the bewildered figure of the woman who had sent him in hot haste on board the brig with a message of trust spoken with an air of mingled confidence and preoccupation, as if her mind had been following while she spoke some other meaning of the same plain wo*rds-an inward meaning leading her away form the simple necessities of the case.
.p119

ROM-MS01, .p7

when she said a few words to us
I felt an inward trembling.

ROMMSD01, .p7

I felt an inward trembling.

ROVTSR11, .p223

sombre fury, fierce merriment, he had known in passing gusts, coming from outside; but never this intimate inward sense of the vanity of all things, that doubt of the power within himself.

ROVTSR12, .p231

On the level of Escampobar the shadows lay long on the ground while the side of the lookout hill remained yet black but edged with an increasing brightness; and the amenity of the stillness was such that it softened for a moment Peyrol's hard inward attitude towards all mankind, including even the captain of the English ship.

ROVTSR15, .p300

On the landing he underwent a short inward struggle at the end of which he approached the door of Catherine's room and opening it a little put his head in.

ROVTSR15, .p308

op"}she will be in despair," he thought writhing inwardly at the mental picture of a distracted Arlette.
But he was reasonable and he thought {op"}but in a month's time will she even give me a thought?" Instantly he felt remorseful with a remorse strong enough to lift him to his feet as if he were morally obliged to go up again and confess to Arlette this sacrilegious cynicism of the night.

ROVTSR15, .p312

Standing stock still he fretted and fumed inwardly wondering where precisely the English ship was by this time and where the devil that thunderstorm had got to; for the sky had become as mute as the oppressed earth.

ROVTSR-6, .p83

But inwardly the old rover was intensely awake.

ROVTSR-8, .p137

Inwardly he was asking himself what the lieutenant was driving at.

LJ-MS-05, .p59

I don't mean especially military courage, or civil courage, or any special kind of courage I mean just that general ability to look events men and temptations straight in the face, a readiness unintellectual enough -- goodness knows -- but without a pose, a stiffness, don't you see, ungracious if you like but priceless, an unthinking and blessed stiffness before the outward and inward terrors, before the
.p60

might of nature and the seductive corruption of men, invulnerable to the strenght of facts, to the contagion of example, to the pin pricks of ideas.

LJ-MS20A, .p437

Evident! What is it that by inward pain makes him know himself?

SA-MSK04, .p175B

op" }Oh! nothing" said Ossipon gazing earnestly and quivering inwardly with the desire to find out something but obviously intimidated by the little man's overwhelming unconcern
as to things in general.

SA-MSK04, .p204

op" }Intellectually a nonentity" Ossipon pronounced aloud, abandoning suddenly the inward contemplation of Mrs Verloc's bereaved person and business.

SA-MSK02, .p63

The
movement was so swift
and fierce that Mr Verloc casting an oblique glance quailed inwardly.

SA-MSK02, .p79

And Mr Vladimir developed his idea from on high with scorn and condescension displaying at the same time an amount of ignorance as to the real aims thoughts and methods of the revolutionary world which filled the silent
Mr Verloc with inward consternation.

SA-MSK05, .p222

There they stood perplexed before him as if before a dreadful portent
and he gloated
.p222

inwardly over the chance of this meeting affirming his superiority to the multitude of mankind.

SA-MSK05, .p248

An
inward laugh of derision uncovered not only his teeth
but his gums as well, shook him all over without the slightest sound.

SA-MSK06, .p323

He was speaking
now and the Chief Inspector listened to him with outward deference (which means nothing being a matter of duty) and inwardly with benevolent
toleration.

SA-MSK06, .p334

Chief

Inspector Heat tho' what is called a man was not a smiling animal
But his inward state was that of satisfaction at the passively receptive attitude of the Assistant Commissioner who murmured gently.

SA-MSK08, .p430

Inwardly she quaked because she dreaded and admired the calm self contained character of her daughter Minnie whose displeasure was
.p431
made redoubtable by a diversity of dreadful silences.

SA-MSK08, .p431

But she did not allow her inward apprehensions to rob her of the advantage of venerable placidity conferred upon her outward person by her triple chin, the floating ampleness of her ancient form and the impotent condition of her legs.

SA-MSK08, .p444

op"}How in the world did you manage it mother?"

As not affecting the inwardness of things, which it was Mrs Verloc's principle to ignore, this curiosity was excusable.

SA-MSK08, .p495

She was in the dark as to the inwardness of the word {op"}Shame".

SA-MSK08, .p514

Mr Verloc went on divesting himself of his clothing with the unnoticing inward

.p515

concentration of a man undressing in the solitude of a vast and hopeless desert.

SL-MSY-1, .p54

And

then my eyes were opened as it were and I beheld the amazing *** were to the inwardness of things and speeches the triviality of which had been so wearisome

.p55

baffling and wearisome.

SL-MSY-2, .p182

And yet those day dreams had been without form or colour anticipations not of circumstance but of pure *** and inward sensation.

SUSTIR31, .p237

The doctor

seemed inwardly amused by his recollection of Pozzo di Borgo.

SUSMSR33, .p16

Upon that the Innkeeper will withdrew inwardly perturbed by the thought of the town police coming presently to make inquiries in their observed way and hanging about his inn for days.

WS-TYR01, .p28

Then his voice unexpected in its renewed strength and ghastly self-possession made us shudder inwardly.

SMFTSR-1, .p22

-- {op"}Are the provisions generally dear here " I asked,fretting inwardly at my inanity.

SMFTSR-0, .p6

He lay in my own deck-chair made fast to the rail, wrapped up in my own rugs, ghastly like one risen from the dead, looking on at the work of the ship and the conduct of the voyage, and visibly fretting himself with the inward criticism of all these proceedings in which he could take no part.

SES-MS-2, .p89

I passed on with an inward
shudder.

FRS-MS-4, .p105

And this sideways glance in conjunction with the hooked nose, the whole bulky, ungainly sprawling person struck Freya as so comically moody that inwardly perturbed as she was she could not help smiling.

FRS-MS-4, .p148
She bowed
her fair head feeling
a sudden inward disontent a nervous lassitude as though she had passed through some exhausting crisis.

FRS-MS-5, .p184
op"} On -- the -- reef
he repeated still lower and
.p184
as if attending inwardly to the birth of some awful and amazing sensation.

FRSTSR-1, .p16
It induced in him a fierce inward restlessness both of activity and desire.

FRSTSR-4, .p60
And their sideways glance in conjunction with the hooked nose, the whole bulky, ungainly sprawling person struck Freya as so comically moody that, inwardly discomposed as she was, she could not help smiling.

FRSTSR-5, .p102
op"} on -- the -- reef " he

.p102

repeated still lower and as if attending inwardly to the birth of some awful and amazing sensation.

VICTPR44, .p551

When

Wang entered with a tray his narrow eyes tilted inwards by the prominence of salliant cheekbones, kept her under stealthy observation all the time.

Neither one nor the other of that white couple paid the slightest attention to him, and he withdrew without having heard them exchange a single word.

VICTPR48, .p616

She exhaled a sigh

of relief when the spear-blades retreated out of sight, sliding inwards -- the horrible things! IN a spot, facing Heyst a pair of yellow hands parted the leaves, and a face filled the small opening; a face with very noticeable eyes.

VICTPR4X, .p579

But

when he turned about suddenly he showed so distorted a face that it made Heyst pause in wonder at the whites of the eyes blinking horribly as though the man were inwardly convulsed.

BODTSR-1, .p39

op"}The silence was like a seal on his ears, and his nervous inward impatience grew intolerable.

POMTSU-1, .p3

They

moved and disturbedhim, like the signs of a horrible inward travail which was firghtfully apparent to the fresh eye he had brought from his isloation in Malta, where he had settled after five strenuous years of adventure and exploration.

POMTSU-1, .p23

moved by a delicate consideratin of rthat splendid girl he tired to thik out for the man a character of inward excellence and outward gits -- some extraordinary seduction.

POMTSU-1, .p32

Professor Moorsom, slight frame of middle height, a thoughtful keen head under the thick wavy hair, veiled dark eyes under straight eyebrows, and with an inward gaze which when disengaged and arriving at one seemed to issue from an obscure dream of books, from the limbo of meditation, showed himself extremely gracious to

.p33
him.

POMTSU-1, .p34

Andhe took care with a great inward effort to make them reaasonable without giving them a discouraging complexion.

POMTSU-1, .p45

and he thought this with inward despair which kept him slent

as much almost as his astonishment.

EOT-MS-3, .p57

He

had been asking himself -- what next?

From the feeling of loneliness of inward emptiness and loss, as if his very soul had been taken out of him forcibly had sprung the thought of starting right off to join his daughter.