

UPWARD - not finished

AF-MS-07, .p18

Day after day, month after month, year after year he has been falling, falling, falling, It was a smooth round, black thing and the black walls had been rushing upwards with wearisome rapidity.

GRU-MS-1, .p44

Indicate tremendous muscular effort for that Then sits bowed as if drowsy looked at the palms
of his half closed hands Sargeant snatches musket from sentry and fires but Santra strikes it upwards
.p45
R.
G.R.

GRU-MS-1, .p87F

clasped hands ****
upward-
Th* staggered

AF-MS-05, .p17

He gazed into her eyes hungrily for a minute and let her go with a sigh then laying down in the canoe he put his head on her knees, gazing upwards and
.p18
stretching his arms backwards till his hands met round the girls waist.

AF-MS-05, .p19

Suddenly a great gerb of yellow rays shot upwards from behind the black curtain of trees lining the banks of the Pantai.
The stars went out; the little black clouds at the zenith glowed for a moment with crimson tints and the thick mist stirred by the gentle breeze -- the sigh of waking nature -- whirled round and broke into fantastically torn pieces, disclosing the wrinkled surface of the river sparkling in the broad light of day.

AF-MS-05, .p22

Plants shooting upward, entwined, interlaced in inextricable confusion; climbing madly and brutally over each other in the terrible silence of a desperate struggle towards the life giving sunshine above, as if struck with sudden horror at the seething mass of corruption below; at the death and decay from which they sprang.

AF-MS-11, .p4

Only
the parasites seemed to live in a sinuous rush upwards into the air and sunshine, feeding on the dead and the living alike, and crowning their victims with pink and blue flowers that gleamed amongst the boughs, incongruous and cruel, like a strident and mocking note in the solemn
.p5
harmony of the doomed trees.

AF-MS-11, .p11

-- A small blue flame crept amongst the dry branches and the crackling of reviving fire was the only sound as they faced each other in the speechless emotion of that meeting; then the dry fuel caught at once and a bright hot flame shot upwards in a blaze as high as their heads -- and in its light they saw each other's eyes.

AF-MS-11, .p11

He was regaining his senses in a slight tremor that ran upwards along his rigid body and hung about the
.p12
his trembling lips; she drew back her head and fastened her eyes on his, in one of those long looks that are a woman's most terrible weapon; a look that is more stirring than the closest touch, and more dangerous than the thrust of a dagger because it also whips the soul out of the body but leaves the body alive and helpless, to be swayed here and there by the capricious tempests of passion and desire.

AF-TSR01, .p02

The tree swung slowly round, amid the hiss and foam of the water and soon getting free of the obstruction began to move down stream again, rolling slowly over, raising upwards a long, denuded branch, like a hand lifted in mute appeal to heaven against the river's brutal and unnecessary violence.
.p03
Almayer's interest in the fate of that tree increased rapidly.

YTH-MS-1, .p62

There were cracks, detonations and from the cone of flame the sparks flew upwards like man is born to trouble, to leaky ships and
.p63
[Blue 22 (63)]
to ships that burn.

What bothered me was that the ship lying broadside to the swell and to such wind as there was{--}a mere breath{--} the boats would not keep astern where they were safe but persisted in a pig headed way) boats have in getting under the counter and then swinging alongside.

AF-TSR05, .p86

He looked into her eyes eagerly for a minute and let her go with a sigh, then lying down in the canoe he put his head on her knees, gazing upwards and stretching his arms backwards till his hands met round the girl's waist.

AF-TSR05, .p87

Suddenly a great sheaf of yellow rays shot upwards from
.p88
behind the black curtain of trees lining the banks of the Pantai.

AF-TSR05, .p90

In a moment
the two little nutshells with their occupants floated quietly side by side, reflected by the black water in the dim light struggling through a high canopy of dense foliage; while above, away up in the broad day, flamed immense red blossoms sending down on their heads a shower of great dew-sparkling petals that
.p90
descended rotating slowly in a continuous and perfumed stream; and over them, under them in the sleeping water; all around them in a ring of luxuriant vegetation bathed in the warm air charged with strong and harsh perfumes, the intense work of tropical nature went on; plants shooting upward, entwined, interlaced in inextricable confusion, climbing madly and brutally over each other in the terrible silence of a desperate struggle towards the life-giving sunshine above -- as if struck with sudden horror at the seething mass of corruption below; at the death and decay from which they sprang.

AF-TSR07, .p128

Day after day, month after month, year after year he had been falling, falling, falling; it was a smooth, round, black thing and the black walls had been rushing upwards with wearisome rapidity.

AF-TSR11, .p224

Only the parasites seemed to live in a sinuous rush upwards into the air and sunshine, feeding on the dead and the living alike and crowning their victims with pink and blue flowers that gleamed amongst the boughs, incongruous and cruel like a strident and mocking note in the solemn harmony of the doomed trees.

AF-TSR11, .p229

A small blue gleam crept amongst the dry branches and the crackling of reviving fire was the only sound as they faced each other in the speechless emotion of that meeting; then the dry fuel caught at once and a bright hot flame shot upwards in a blaze as high as their heads -- and in its light they saw each others eyes.

AF-TSR11, .p229

He was regaining his senses in a slight tremor that ran upwards along his rigid body and hung about his trembling lips; she drew back her head and fastened her eyes on his, in one of those long looks that are a woman's most terrible weapon; a look that is more stirring than the closest touch, and more dangerous than the thrust of a dagger because it also whips the soul out of the body but leaves the body alive and helpless to be swayed here and there by the capricious tempests
.p230
of passion and desire.

AG-MS-1, .p39

Blunt sat
by very detached; his eyes roamed here, and there all over the cafe{a}; and it was while looking upward at the pink foot of a fleshy and very much foreshortened goddess of some sort depicted on the ceiling in an enormous contortion in the Italian style that he let fall casually
.p40
the words {op"}She will manage it for you."

UWE-MS12, .p98

He cast his eyes upwards
.p99
and stood amazed.

UWE-MS12, .p188

Haldin did not stir a limb but his overshadowed eyes moving a little gazed upwards at Razumov with wistful gratitude for this outburst of feeling.

UWE-MS13, invalid format

UWE-MS21, .p388

After a time she crossed herself and raising her eyes upwards as if to heaven to witness she said: {op"}The child was compelled to it".

UWE-MS22, .p483

He too did not expect anything so decisive and at first throwing back his head he looked upwards

through his dark glasses with an air of blind curiosity.

UWE-MS24, .p744

She glanced vaguely down the broad walk{--}The hand she put out eluded my
.p744
grasp by an unexpected upward movement and rested upon my shoulder for a moment.

UWE-MS31, .p850

On the balustrade of the first floor landing a shiny tall hat reposed, rim upwards, opposite a double
.p851
door of the drawing room, haunted, it was said, by ghosts, and frequented, it was to be supposed, by fugitive revolutionists.

UWE-MS32, invalid format

UWE-MS33, .p991

She watched him, her forehead drawn into perpendicular folds the thin black eyebrows diverging upwards like the antennae of an insect.

UWE-MS33, .p1029

Of that cynical theory this was a very subtle and a very scornful application, flouting in its own words the very
.p1029
spirit of ruthless revolution, embodied in that woman with her white hairs and black eyebrows like slightly sinuous lines of indian ink traced upwards with a mephistofelian slant from the two heavy perpendicular folds of a thoughtful frown.

UWE-MS43, .p1305

Her hands were lying palms upwards on her lap she raised her
.p1306
grey eyes slowly.

UWETSR12, .p48

He cast his eyes upwards and stood amazed.

UWETSR12, .p89

Haldin did not stir a limb, but his overshadowed eyes moving a little gazed upwards at Razumov with wistful gratitude for this manifestation of feeling.

UWETSR13, .p110

Lying on his back
he put his hands under his head and stared upward.

OPR-MSY-, .p17

There
fellows having engaged themselves to the company for six months  havins any idea of a month in particular and only a very  notion of time in general had been serving the ause of progress for upwards of two years.

UWETSR24, .p347

And now {it} Au revoir,
I must run"
She glanced vaguely down the broad walk{--}the hand she put out to me eluded my grasp by an unexpected upward movement and rested upon my shoulder.

UWETSR31, .p425

On the balustrade of the first floor landing a shiny tall hat reposed, rim upwards, opposite a double door of the drawing room, haunted it was said, by evoked ghosts, and frequented, it was to be supposed, by fugitive revolutionists.

UWETSR32, .p434

op"}I, don't you see, am a man of action" he said huskily, glancing upwards.

UWETSR33, .p530

She watched him, her forehead drawn into perpendicular folds, the thin black eyebrows diverging upwards like the antennae{diagraph} of an insect.

UWETSR33, .p559

Of that cynical theory this was a very subtle and a very scornful application, flouting in its own words the
.p559
very spirit of ruthless revolution, embodied in that woman with her white hairs and black eyebrows, like slightly sinuous lines of indian ink, traced upwards from the two heavy perpendicular folds of a thoughtful frown.

UWETSR43, .p793

Her hands were lying lifelessly, palms upwards on her lap; she raised her grey eyes slowly.

NN-MS-04, .p104

Under a crowd of startled faces bending over him he lay on his back staring upwards in a continuous and intolerable manner.

VICTPR42, .p526

He still, upward gaze had a patient mournfulness which troubled him like a suggestion of an unconceivable depth.

VICTPR21, .p103

During her extraordinary transit as if everything in the hall were dirt under her feet, her scornful eyes met the upward glance of Berg who however looked away at once towards the girl left behind by that furry.

VICTPR26,