REPRESENTATIVES FROM...

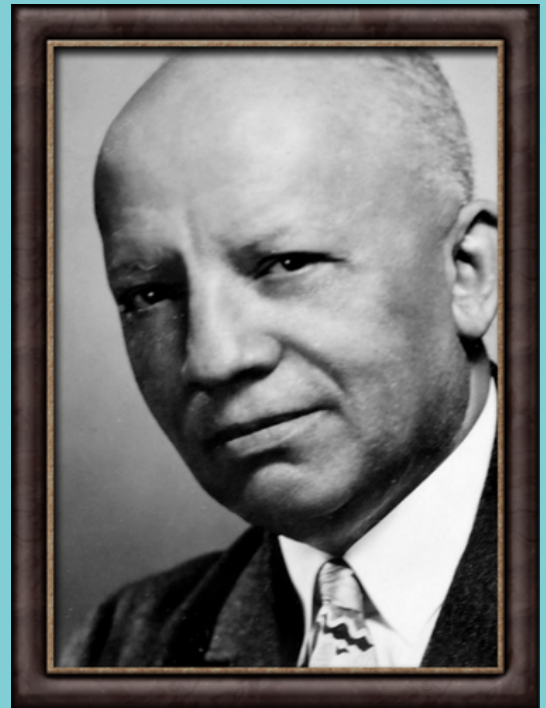

February: Black History Month

Black history month dates back to Negro History Week in 1925: A week founded by Harvard-trained historian, Carter G. Woodson.

The week first encompassed birthdays of Abraham Lincoln and Frederick Douglass.

In 1976, the week was expanded to a month as President Gerald Ford encouraged American's to "seize the opportunity to honor the too-often neglected accomplishments of Black Americans in every area of endeavor throughout our history."

The theme for the 2023 Black History Month is "Black Resistance" in honor of all the African Americans that have resisted all forms of oppression in the United States.

Carter G. Woodson

By resisting, Black people have triumphed, succeeded, and progressed as seen in the dismantling of Jim and Jane Crow segregation in the South, increased political representation at all levels of government, the passage of Civil Rights Act of 1964, and increased diverse representation of Black experiences in media, and much, much more!

Black people and supporting allies continually fight for justice against discrimination in all sectors of society from employment to education to housing.

Historically in the United States, it has often been Black individuals leading the charge to push the U.S. to live up to its ideals of freedom, liberty, and justice for all.
