COLLEGE OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

Kent State University's College of Business Administration offers a baccalaureate program called the Bachelor of Business Administration (B.B.A.) degree. Since the economics major prepares students well for practically any career by providing skills such as the ability to conceptualize, analyze and solve problems; the ability to quickly find, organize and use relevant information; and analytical ability, students with career interests not directly in economics should also consider economics as a major.

THE DEGREE PROGRAMS

In addition to the undergraduate programs, students wanting to expand their knowledge even further can pursue graduate business programs at Kent State leading to the Master of Business Administration (MBA), the Master of Arts in economics, the Master of Science in accounting or the Ph.D. in business administration.

ACCREDITATION

Kent State's College of Business Administration is accredited by AACSB International — the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business. Kent State's College of Business Administration is one of only 5 percent of business schools in the world to be accredited by AACSB. Less than one-third of the business schools in the nation meet this organization's rigorous accreditation standards. Kent State's College of Business Administration is in an elite group, being one of only 178 universities worldwide to achieve dual accreditation in both business and accounting. To receive accounting accreditation, an institution must first earn or maintain AACSB business accreditation.

Accreditation is important to students because it suggests certain standards are met. Such standards include the credentials of faculty who teach business courses, the resources that are made available to business students (such as computers, software, study areas within the university's buildings, library holdings, etc.), the types of courses that students take for the B.B.A. degree and the economics major and admission requirements to the College of Business Administration.

THE B.B.A. DEGREE PROGRAM

All qualified students (based on Kent State admission requirements) are admitted directly to a business major (i.e., accounting, business management, computer information systems, economics, entrepreneurship, finance, managerial marketing and marketing). Students who are undecided about a business major should choose "Business-undeclared." During the freshman year, students are introduced to the world of business with a course called Exploring Business.

During the freshman and sophomore years, all business majors take an introductory course in each of the basic areas of business (financial and managerial accounting, microeconomics and macroeconomics, computer applications, principles of management, legal and regulatory environment to business, principles of marketing and business statistics) along with the Kent Core (humanities, fine arts, social sciences, basic sciences). In the junior and senior years, students take additional core business courses (finance, operations management and business policies) and focus on their major. Business experiences as well as education abroad are all encouraged.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS FOR THE ADVANCED BUSINESS PROGRAM PROGRESSION REQUIREMENTS

After completing 46 or more credit hours, students must have earned a minimum 2.25 cumulative GPA in order to progress in the economics major.

THE ECONOMICS MAJOR

Economics is the study of how society manages its scarce resources. A major in economics is excellent preparation for many careers. Employers are interested in potential employees who can conceptualize and solve problems; can quickly find, organize and use relevant information; and have analytical ability. These skills are emphasized in economics. Economics classes deal with vital current topics that are relevant to many careers, including our financial and banking system, environmental problems and policies, the economic relations between the United States and foreign countries, government spending and taxation policies, why the standard of living is so much lower in third world countries than in the United States and urban development and public policies in housing, transportation and welfare.

THE ECONOMICS MINOR

There is an economics minor available for students interested in economics but wishing to major in another discipline. Like the major, the minor in economics is very flexible and allows students to concentrate in areas of specialization, such as international economics, labor economics, monetary economics and public economics.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

Kent State University's College of Business Administration offers a baccalaureate program called the Bachelor of Business Administration (B.B.A.) degree. Since the economics major prepares students well for practically any career by providing skills such as the ability to conceptualize, analyze and solve problems; the ability to quickly find, organize and use relevant information; and analytical ability, students with career interests not directly in economics should also consider economics as a major.

RELATED EXTRACURRICULAR OPPORTUNITIES

To build connections for eventual employment opportunities and to develop organizational and leadership skills, students are encouraged to join the Economics Club. This organization promotes extracurricular activities in the field of economics and business, and it gives students the chance to interact with faculty and practitioners in informal settings. The Economics Club is a student organization open to all students. Its purpose is to provide activities that are both enjoyable and educational to students interested in economics or law. Another student organization that presents considerable appeal to any business major is Delta Sigma Pi, the professional business fraternity, which is open to all students. In addition, there are more than 325 student organizations offering opportunities to develop personally and professionally.

RELATED ACADEMIC OPPORTUNITIES

Employers and educators recognize the importance of building a strong liberal arts background, especially for business students. Students are encouraged to consider minors offered by Kent State's other colleges and schools. For example, a student may want to work in economics for an international firm. Having a major in economics and a minor in political science might be very helpful in achieving this goal, or perhaps students would want to consider a minor in a foreign language.

The College of Business Administration also encourages economics majors to consider a minor in:

- Accounting
- Computer Information Systems
- Entrepreneurship
- Finance
- Healthcare Systems Management
- Human Resource Management
- International Business
- Management
- Marketing

LEARNING COMMUNITIES

First-year students have the opportunity to enhance their college experience by participating in the Business Learning Community developed around the student's academic interest in business. The Business Learning Community is located in Prentice Hall. Students living on campus reside in Prentice Hall (unless in honors housing) and commuters are welcome to join as well. The Business Learning Community immerses the student in an environment that supports academic and professional success. The Business Learning Community provides a format that brings business student peers and faculty members into smaller groups creating academic and social support networks.

Learning Communities provide unique opportunities to:

- Connect students with their peers quickly and develop lifelong friendships.
- Develop leadership skills by taking a principles course introducing students to leadership basics and further develop their potential through practical experience.
- Learn about the business world by participating in special lectures, seminars, guest speakers, industry visits and professional networking opportunities.

CAREER SERVICES OFFICE

The College of Business Administration highly values the significance of out-of-classroom business experience. The College of Business Career Services Office can provide business experiences that will help students:

- Develop skills in the workplace before graduation.
- Interact in a professional setting to prepare students for the transition from an academic to a corporate environment.
- Understand the level of performance and professional behavior expected by employers.
- Develop a network of professional contacts that will become invaluable upon graduation.

The Career Services Office's goal is to continually expand partnerships and collaborations with firms locally, nationally and around the globe. Those alliances will provide the student with the opportunity for positive, enriching practical business opportunities that can equal future career placement.

SCHOLARSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

To assist students in funding their education, the College of Business Administration offers financial and merit-based scholarships. Scholarships are available to incoming freshmen through graduating seniors and vary from tuition and book awards to stipends. College of Business Administration scholarship information is available online to incoming students and can be found posted in various locations throughout the college for sophomores, juniors and seniors.

Generally, to be considered for these scholarships, students need to apply early in the spring semester. An average GPA of 3.0 or higher is a typical academic qualifier for most scholarships, but students of all academic levels are encouraged to apply.

Other freshman scholarships are available through the Honors College at 330-672-2312 or the Student Financial Aid Office at 330-672-2972.
