John Logue, Professor of Political Science at Kent State University for over 30 years, was the founding director of the Ohio Employee Ownership Center at KSU. He was deeply committed to promoting economic democracy and saw employee ownership as a means to that end. In his memory, the John Logue Memorial Employee Ownership Scholarship was established.

This scholarship has two interrelated purposes: to memorialize Professor Logue’s work in promoting economic democracy through employee ownership, and to make higher education more accessible for KSU undergraduates who share some interests in Professor Logue’s work, broadly conceived.

◼ For those applicants using the tuition scholarship:
  o WITH THE APPLICATION submit a three-page that connects the student’s plan or record of studies to values and principles associated with economic democracy, employee ownership, or progressive social policies.
